Summary of Objective

The investment objective of the Davy Long Term Growth Fund is to seek total returns with an emphasis on long term growth but with the potential for some degree of income generation. There is no guarantee the fund will meet its objectives.

Quarterly Fund Commentary

The ongoing trade war can be viewed as a war between two distinct types of economies. On the one hand there are the exporters i.e. Germany (and the Eurozone as a whole), Japan, Emerging Markets (EM) and China and on the other hand, the large importing countries which are dominated by the United States (US). Since the US is the primary agitator in the battle so far, it is fair to assume that the US stands to benefit the most from revisiting global tariffs, with others set to lose out. The US runs a large and persistent current account deficit (which it funds by issuing debt) and this is not a sustainable model over the longer term. One could argue that President Trump is right to try and rewrite the rule book, although many would question his unconventional methods. There is no doubt that in terms of stock markets there has only been one winner, a fact that Trump almost certainly considers a validation of his policies. In addition to this, European growth has been slowing in recent months as confidence wanes and business sentiment declines, due to the uncertainty of Trump's policies. Meanwhile Brexit stumbles on with little or no sign of a resolution as Theresa May battles to shore up opinion and the Labour Party distance themselves from any Brexit, that does not involve a mandate from the people.

Given the back drop of the ongoing trade war, the story for the year so far continued in Quarter 3 (Q3) with the US equity market once again powering ahead of other major regions. The S&P 500 was up c. 8.1% (EUR) in comparison to Europe c. +0.5% (EUR) and EM c. -0.4% (EUR). Emerging markets suffered from rising interest rates in the US as the Federal Reserve (Fed) continued their rate hiking cycle – as US wage growth picks up - putting pressure on EM currencies. Argentina and Turkey bore the brunt of the impact with their currencies falling substantially as concerns rose regarding the sustainability of their borrowing. The contagion flowed into other EM countries hitting equity returns and raising concerns about the stability of EM stocks. Adding to these concerns are weakness around Chinese growth - which has long been a driver of EM growth – as the economy naturally slowed after years of strong growth and US tariffs started to bite, as President Trump continued to push for higher tariffs on Chinese goods being sold in the US. Our active managers fared well overall with Brandes European Value and Threadneedle European Select outpacing the broader European market. In the US the Vanguard US Opportunities Fund had another strong quarter adding to its gains for the year to date and our global healthcare call has performed very well up 12.2% (EUR) for the quarter. Fixed income had a weak quarter with Global Government bonds down c. 1.3% (EUR), European Government Bonds fared little better falling 1% (EUR). Corporate bonds held up well on the quarter with most bonds flat to slightly up.

In currencies the Euro/US Dollar (USD) pair has been relatively flat on the quarter with the Euro slightly stronger. Somewhat surprisingly the British Pound has also stayed relatively unchanged over the quarter, although the UK market has suffered from the uncertainty falling c. 1.5% (EUR) during the quarter.

The Davy Long Term Growth Fund benefited from the stronger equity market with equities making up 70% of the holdings. Overall the Davy Long Term Growth Fund was positive for Q3 rising c. 2%.

Investment Committee Commentary

Equities The committee retains a neutral stance on equities with our portfolio holdings at or close to their long-term weighting. While the current run in equities is now approaching 10 years, there doesn't appear to be anything on the immediate horizon that will derail the current momentum. The committee is keeping a close eye on key indicators as the underlying fundamentals remain robust, with global growth picking up and inflation remaining in check. In addition, US earnings growth has been particularly strong because of the recently enacted tax cuts supporting equity markets. Trump's rhetoric and actions on trade have caused pockets of weakness in Europe and EM, however it is unlikely to cause a recession without an additional catalyst.

Fixed Income Bond yields (which move inversely to prices) have increased steadily over the year to date as inflation picks up, albeit to levels that the committee would consider to be sustainable and more in line with historic norms. We maintain a negative view on fixed income and hold shorter maturity bonds currently than we have done historically. As we near the end of the cycle we would expect to see our negative stance moderating, although we do not see this happening in the immediate future.

Alternatives Alternatives are a fundamental part of our multi asset process and are designed to add uncorrelated returns to the more traditional portfolio e.g. stocks and bonds. While alternatives have struggled in the year to date, they are struggling against the backdrop of strong equity markets which offsets some of the underperformance. We continue to assess the role of absolute return in the portfolio and will make any changes that the committee feels are warranted, based on the detailed analysis and reviews that are constantly undertaken on this element of the portfolio.

Cash Cash deposit rates remain negative and our outlook for cash is neutral with minimal levels held across portfolios. The cash that we do hold is available to deploy at any given opportunity and the committee likes the flexibility that this allows. Cash rates are likely to stay low until late summer 2019 based on comments from the European Central Bank (ECB) President Mario Draghi. Barring an unlikely spike in inflation in Europe we see no reason to doubt this time line and continue to monitor opportunities to deploy cash in the market.

Changes to the Fund

We added the Goldman Sachs Core Equity Fund at a 2.1% weighting, there was a corresponding reduction made to Blackrock Global Equity Income Fund with the new weight at 2.1%. The decision reflects the view of the investment committee that a core approach is more favorable at this stage in the cycle than an income focused approach.

Underlying Fund Commentary

iShares Global Healthcare Exchange Traded Fund (ETF) +11.6% (USD)	Healthcare stocks had a strong quarter as strong earnings fed through to share price performance, no doubt aided substantially by the tax cuts enacted in the US. Pfizer posted strong earnings with the stock making significant gains over the quarter, this fed through to big pharma stocks in general giving the sector as a whole a welcome boost.
Threadneedle European Select +1.6% (EUR)	Threadneedle generated a positive return over the quarter of 1.6% but lagged its broader European benchmark. Detractors from performance included the fund's holding in Anheuser Busch Inbev, which fell due to revenue declines from its main beer brands. Within the Health Care sector Threadneedle prefer more niche healthcare stocks and are underweight the large, diversified pharma stocks when compared to the broader market. This detracted over the quarter as large healthcare names performed strongly. Contributors to performance include stock selection within the IT sector.
Vanguard US Opportunities +8.3% (USD)	The Vanguard US Opportunities fund which is managed by Primecap continues to deliver strong returns and has now outperformed the broader S&P 500 index by c. 5.6% in the year to date. The team at Primecap has built up expertise in analysing healthcare stocks and have a long track record of adding value through stock selection in niche, specialist healthcare companies. In Q3 the fund also added value through its large position in the Airlines sector.
PIMCO Global Low Duration Real Return Fund -0.3% (EUR)	The fund performed relatively well in comparison to the broader global government bond market as inflation continues to rise globally. Higher inflation is a negative for most bonds and thus the inflation linked bonds held offer diversification and a hedge against higher inflation rates. Given that we are approaching low levels of unemployment in many areas of the economy thus increasing the potential for higher wage inflation, this fund will continue to provide protection to the fixed income portion of the portfolio.
Ruffer Total Return Fund -0.6% (EUR)	Ruffer fell for the quarter alongside absolute return funds in general as some specific stock picks went against them and the protection element of their portfolio weighed on performance, this element of the portfolio should protect in the event of a sharp selloff but in the absence of this it is a drag on performance. The fund has performed well in what has been a difficult environment for absolute return funds.
JPMorgan Global Macro Opportunities -3.1% (EUR)	JPMorgan struggled on the quarter due to some stock specific issues and due to the protection measures they hold in portfolios. JPMorgan invests in secular long-term trends and these tend to play out over a long period of time which can mean there are periods of underperformance in the shorter term.
